What the Picture Theaters Have to Tell You.

A striking contrast of the manhood of the east and of the west is strongly pictured in "Ben Blair," the Pallas production coming to the Alta theater on the Paramount program today.
In the scene where Ben, the unpolished westerner, goes to force an issue with Sidwell, the society favorite who has supplanted him in Florence Winthrop's favor the two American types are exemplified. Blair finds Sidwell drinking heavily with congenial friends and on their departure his western blood forces him to say:
"You're the only obstacle between me and the woman I love. Can you tell me any reason why I shouldn't remove that obstacle?" But his western blood also makes him bow to the seeming truth in Sidwell's answer.
"Yes, a good reason—she loves me and she doesn't love you."
Cooler thoughts and passed memories later make him doubt this statement. He goes to Florence's father with a plan that awakens the explanation's admiration and support and brings this strong western drama to a successful finish.

INTERESTING PICTURE IS
"A WIFE'S SACRIFICE"

"A Wife's Sacrifice," the William Fox six act photoplay that is showing at the Pastime today for the last time is an interesting, highly dramatic photoplay of the first water. Included in the cast in the noted dramatist, Richard Mansfield, assisted by beautiful Genevieve Hamper, Claire Whitney, Stuart Holmes, Baby Jane Lee, and others. Anita Stewart and Earle Williams also appear in their usual picture. Tomorrow, in conjunction with the regular Saturday program will be shown Bud Fisher's cartoon comedy, Mutt and Jeff, in "Mutt's Toothache." This cartoon is a laugh from start to finish and we guarantee it to cure the worst case of the blues.

Sunday the Pastime will present Nance O'Neil who is conceded by critics to be the greatest emotional actress of the day in the V. L. S. E. production, "Souls in Bondage." In conjunction with this feature will be shown Rose Melville, the original Sis Hopkins in "A Leap Year Wooing."
